NATURAL HISTORY.—One feature of a circus that is given least consideration, and which is entitled to more than passing notice, is the educational value thereof, aside from its amusement features. JOHN B. CASTLEMAN. A child is sent to school and the average youth or youngster finds as most interesting the study of natural history. It dotes on the ferocious lion; it marvels at the monstrousness of the elephant, and worries over the pronunciation of "hippopotamus" and "rhinoceros." A teacher will vouch for the statement that one object lesson is of more value than a hundred book lessons. The menagerie of a big circus affords the only possible opportunity for a child to study in life the animals whose pictures they are wont to see in their school-books. Consequently the great educational value of these traveling amusement institutions. On Friday, Oct. 13th, the famous Adam Forepaugh and Sells Bros. combined circuses, menageries and hippodromes are announced to exhibit in Paris. It is claimed for this aggregation and justly so, that its wild beast exhibit surpasses in variety and extent that of any other known collection of a similar character. It embraces the menageries of the original Adam Forepaugh show and that of the equally as well known Sells Brothers. The zoological departments of both of these amusement entertainments has and always will be endeavor and a fabulous amount of money has been expended in bringing together this collection of animals of every clime and condition, which, it is promised, contains the rarest specimns of the animal kingdom. To make the menagerie department one of special interest the management makes the announce ment that men who have made natural history a study will be in attendance at all times, their sole duty being for the especial benefit of the children. What better opportunity can be conceived for giving the younger generation an object

Adm. Dewey is the guest of Dr. W. Seward Webb at his magnificent country residence, Shelburne Farms, and will not become the state's guest until to industrial women. Be it, therefore, Thursday at the capital, Montpelier. New York Tuesday morning occupy-Elsmere.

While in New York state Adm. Dewey remained within the car chatting with the others of the party, but | in behalf of our country. after crossing the Vermont line above Whitehall the admiral seemed to grow a little nervous, spoke of his homecoming repeatedly, and went on the observation one, to view the scenery. He seemed to be very happy, and to those who were around him it appeared almost as if the admiral had a touch of homesickness. As the train neared Shelburne the admiral watched the changing scenery intently. Here and there a flag was seen, but in our efforts. it was nature that had done the lavish painting on this great oceasion, for the Vermont woods are one mass of autumn color. When the train pulled into Shelburne the villagers and folks from the surrounding towns, from even as far away as Burlington, had made up a crowd of nearly 3,000. The engine stopped just at the station, so that the rear car, the Elsmere, Adm. Dewey stood upon the rear plat- says: form. Preceded by Dr. Webb, he walked across the lawn, where a lanwalked across the lawn a band from Burlington played "Under the Eagle," a selection made at the special request of the admiral.

Suddenly McKenzie threw his cap inthree cheers for Adm. Dewey, the hero peaceful conditions." of Manila." The cheers were given.

Along the road were drawn up 200 school children, each with a flag, and headed by their teacher. At a signal, the children sang a parody on "Yan- glanders were shot. The Garonne kee Doodle Dandy," beginning: "Yankee Dewey went to sea." The movement of the carriage was so timed | Seattle. that it reached the end of the line just as the chorus was reached and the admiral, who had stood up in passing, bowed his acknowledgments. The horses were then whipped up and the admiral was driven to Shelburne house at Shelburne Farms, three miles away.

A STREET DUEL.

Dr. H. J. Cameron and Dr. P. D. Mahoney Probably Fatally Wounded at Alexander City, Ala.-Ten Shots Fired.

ALEXANDER CITY, Ala., Oct. 11.-A street duel took place Tuesday evening between Dr. H. J. Cameron, of the Romanoff Land and Mining Co., and I wo of our men being wounded. Dr. P. D. Mahoney, occulist. Both men were desperately angry for some cause not yet known to the public, and opened up a deadly fusilade with pistols, with little or no warning. Ten shots were fired, two striking Dr. Mahoney, one taking effect in the vital part of the stomach and the other in the thigh. Dr. Cameron was shot twice, one ball taking effect in the jaw and the other in his back. Both men are probably fatally wounded.

It is announced that the fleet of transports conveying Gen. Sir Redvers Buller's army corps will be escorted by war ships, while further dispatch boats and gunboats will be sent to South African waters.

The government has already expendrd £5,000,000 in naval and military preparations, the orders placed with contractors this week alone amounting to £600,000. The authorities anticipating a serious reduction in the output of the South African coal mines, has ordered 5 000 tons of English steam coal to be sent to the Cape for the use of the war ships.

CONYNGHAM GREENE.

Agent at Pretoria Has Been Assassinated-Rumor Unconfirmed.

London, Oct. 12.—It is rumored that Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent at Pretoria, has been assassinated there.

The report however is unconfirmed and is discredited at the colonial office. The rumor that Mr. Greene had been murdered is of doubtful origin and is considered extremely improbable as it is believed that in obedience to orders from the imperial government Mr. Greene had already left Pretoria confiding the care of British interests to United States Consul Marcum.

Col. Patterson said in part:

"It is not difficult to account for the patriotism of the southern people. A common heritage in the revolutionary war; in the formation and adoption of the constitution; in the administration of the government, its progress and development; and in the great names which adorn our history, was like some great centrifugal force impelling us to a common destiny. The broad patriotism, the unbounded benevolence and the enlightened statesmanship of Abraham Lincoln were farreaching factors in the problem.

"We are here as members of the family, not as guests, to unite with our fellow citizens throughout the republic in a vow to forever maintain and defend the honor of its flag and to preserve for ourselves and posterity the integrity of its free institutions.' Gov. D. W. Jones, of Little Rock. Ark., paid a glowing tribute to "the old veteran at the passing of the nineteenth century."

Gen. John C. Black, of Chicago, took as his topic "The northern patriot." John W. Lockett, of Henderson, Ky., recounted the victories of "The Stars and Stripes." He said in part:

"Standing at the opening door of a new century, with thankfulness and praise to God that we live in this land of constitutional freedom, we salute with heart and soul this banner of the union."

The banquet closed long after midnight with a speech from Gov. Mount, of Indiana, on "Our guests," in which he pictured the gatheriug of the veterans of the blue and the gray as alike guests of the state and of the country, re-united, fraternalized and standing under one flag.

Booker T. Washington Thinks It Is Settling Itself.

How He Would Have the Colored Race Act Toward the Whites -Work Accomplished at Tuskegee Institute.

[Special Tuskegee (Ala.] Letter.] The race question, in America, in spite of occasional outrages on both sides, is gradually settling itself, and a larger part of the work of solving the problem is being accomplished by that portion of the population whose skin contains the greater amount of coloring pigment. Booker T. Washington, who may, at the present time, be regarded as their representative man, although there are many others as able but not so well known, believes that while holding firmly and securely to everything guaranteed by ington so earnestly desires that the the constitution of the United States, colored people should be expert workor that is fundamental to citizenship, men at all the trades that students "the colored people should make every without funds are enabled to work out effort possible to secure the friendship, all their expenses at the school. THE NEGRO PROBLEM could learn and work their own way, he walked and worked his passage to that point, where he found himself surrounded by an atmosphere of business. Christian influences and a spirit of selfhelp that awakened every latent faculty and brought a realization of what it meant to be a man instead of a piece of transferable property. On finishing his school course, in 1881, he began, at Tuskegee, Ala., what he intends to be his life work. Without a dollar, in a church and small shanty, with one teacher and 30 pupils, he established a school, which, with its spirit of work and industrial thrift, aided by the state and by some people of the north, has developed into an institution of 1,000 students, 81 teachers and 38 buildings From the ranks of these students are to be sent out well-educated, self-reliant young men and women to live among the ten millions of colored peo ple of the south, and help to elevate norant of the date of his own birth. His life began as a slave on a plantation in Virginia. He must have been a very small boy when the war broke out, for he once said: "Night after night, before the dawn of day, on an old plantation in Virginia, I recall the form of my sainted mother bending over the bundle of rags that enveloped my body, on a dirt floor, breathing a fervent prayer to heaven that 'Massa Lincoln' might succeed and that some day she and I might be free." After the close of the war, Booker Washington went with his brothers to West Virginia, where they worked in the coal mines for pay in money. One day, on seeing a negro laboriously spelling out a newspaper paragraph to a group of colored people, who gazed at him with open-mouthed wonder and veneration, a desire for study was awakened in the boy. He obtained a situation to do chores for a lady who taught him to ern negroes must live in the country, of $50 a carat this would make more especial attention is given to agriculture. Mr. George W. Carver, head of this department, is a graduate of Iowa state college. A recently issued pamphlet of his tells how he raised between two and three hundred bushels of sweet potatoes on an acre of ground where the average yield is less than 50 bushels per acre. A large herd of cows and a good dairy and creamery furnish opportunity for instruction in dairy work, to which especial attention is given. For the last ten years a conference of negro farmers, from a dozen states, has met annually under the guidance of Mr. Washington at Tuskegee, to "talk over" their affairs. They are composed of those born too soon to enjoy educational advantages. These people exhibit such intense interest in the proceedings that their "one day in the year" is much too short for them. And thus is the race problem working itself out in the heart of the section where those deeds are sometimes committed that cause so much discussion pro and con by those at a distance who are ignorant of the real condition of affairs in the black belt of the south,

MAINE CHEWING TOBACCO. Farmers Fiavoring It with Maple Sirup Just as Their Grand-

up, a good many farmers in Maine have been making their own chewing tobacco, just as their grandfathers did. Tobacco seed is bought in Virginia or Kentucky, and planted in hot beds or boxes early in the spring. After danger from frost has passed, the seedlings are transplanted in rich ground and allowed to grow until September 1. The stalks are cut off near the ground on a dry day and the whole plant, with leaves attached is hung in a

MIGHT DESTROY ALL LIFE. Tesla, the Great Electrician, Afraid

That He Might Ignite the Atmosphere. In a signed article in the current number of the Electrical Review, Nicola Tesla describes some of his experiments in the line of electrical currents of high voltage, and gives details of the coil which he uses. "The discharges of such a coil," he adds, "when of an electro-motive force of a few millions of volts, excite powerful affinities in the atmospheric nitrogen causing it to combine readily with the oxygen and other elements, particularly in the presence of aqueous vapor. So energetic are these actions and so strangely do such powerful charges behave that I have often experienced a fear that the atmosphere might be ignited, a terrible possibility, which Sir William Crookes, with his piercing intellect, has already considered. Who knows but such a calamity is possible? And who can tell with certitude that periodical cessations of organic life on the globe might not be caused by ignition of the air and destruction of its life-sustaining qualities, accidentally or as a con-

A QUICKSILVER FOUNTAIN.

An Odd Exhibit from Queensland Which Is Soon to Be Made in London.

The government of Queensland are going to show the world, or such portion of it as may visit the forthcoming exhibition at Earl's court, that the colony can produce quicksilver equally with America, Spain and Austria, says the London Mail.

A mere pool of quicksilver in a glass those responsible for the arrangement of the Queensland section propose to show this precious liquid mineral lending a new and effective beauty to a fountain.

Mr. C. Bright, F.R.S.D., A. M. Inst. C. E., is the engineer responsible for this novel departure in the way of fountains, and he gave some interesting details of its construction to a Daily Mail representative the other day.

"This," he said, "can hardly be called a fountain in the ordinary acceptation of the word, for the difficulties of dealing with such a heavy body as mercury are too great to allow of a jet such as one sees playing in Trafalgar square. What we are going to have is an arrangement of two basins, one above the other. These will be of iron, enameled black, to give a greater effect to the falling quicksilver."

You may go on with this treatment for any length of time, always slightly adding to the heat of the water, and giving the fish more and more to eat, until the water is as hot as your hand can bear. If you then put the fish in a radiated aquarium-that is, an aquarium with heat playing on a part of it, so that one-half of the water is colder than the other-the fish will keep to the hot part and bask in it. It is said that a fish will even live a little while without outward discomfort in water not a case would be no indication at all, so great deal below the boiling point. A fish certainly seems to derive benefit from living in hot water, and is better enting after such a life when it is dead.

Chinese Politeness.

When in Shanghai Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia were given an amusing example of Chinese politeness. While visiting a notable mandarin their host asked through the interpreter the age of Prince Henry. On being told that the emperor's brother is a little over 36 the mandarin turned to the prince and said: "You appear 50." He then inquired the age of the princess, who is 32. The interpreter, Herr Voigt, an honest citizen of Stettin, hesitated to inform the princess what the mandarin replied on learning her age. Prince Henry, however, has a smattering of Chinese, and laughingly commanded: "Out with it, Voigt!" The Chinese flatterer had told the princess: "You look 60."

More Precious Than Diamonds. Among the rarest of precious stones

the green garnet is probably the most valuable. This gem is of superb, rich shade, far more brilliant than that of the emerald. A green garnet easily commands double the price of a pure diamond of equal size, because it is so so common that their cost is trifling.

Sacrificed to Blood Poison.

Those who have never had Blood Poison can not know what a desperate condition it can produce. This terrible disease which the doctors are totally unable to cure, is communicated from one generation to another, inflicting its taint upon countless innocent ones.

Some years ago I was ineculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. The little one was unequal to the struggle, and its life was yielded up to the fearful poisen. For six long years I suf-fered untold misery. I was covered with sores and ulcers from head to foot, and no language can express my feelings of woe during those long years. I had the best medical treatment. Several physicians successively treated me, but all to no purpose. The mercury and potash seemed to add fuel to the awful flame which was devouring me. ### CHAPTER XXI.

THE RESCUE OF ANGIOLA. The next day, as the big gun from the citadel boomed out the twelfth hour and all the bells of the town clanged forth the time, five horsemen rode through the gate of St. Angelo, whose doors were spread wide open. The single sentry on duty paced sleepily up and down; he was longing for his noontide siesta, and the guard of a half-score of Baglioni's lauces lay with their armor off, basking in the mellow sun. A subaltern officer, who had evidently dined to some purpose, reclined on his back, half in, half out of the shade of a few olive trees that grew to the left of the gate, and the ruby on his cheeks showed up all the brighter against the green of the grass on which he was stretched. The horsemen were myself and my four followers. We had taken the route I went the day before with Gian, and the plan I had formed house Jacopo and Bande Nere were to put themselves at the door and engage the guard would blow shrilly on a whistle I had purchased for the purpose. My men at the door, who were armed with arquebuses as well as their swords, would hold the passage, and I should try and account for the Cavaliere Paolo and bear off the prize. If we succeeded, we could easily make the gate, and then, the road to St. Jerome lay open before us. The fact that the attempt was to be made in broad daylight, too, would be a safeguard, as no one would deem that night, was to be adventured at this hour. likewise.' I had partly paved the way for my entrance by my call of yesterday, and was provided with a sufficiently plausible story to keep the cavaliere engaged, whilst I took stock of his surroundings. Jacopo, too, nad been warefully drilled as to how he was to announce me, and the question resolved itself into hard hitting, and a little luck. I had dressed myself with particular care, wearing my buff coat under a gay jerkin, and a short velvet cloak hung from my shoulders. This scribed, of opening a grating was gone through, but on my name being mentioned the porter shut his peep-hole, there was the sound of the removal of a bar, the clank of chains, and the door swung open with a sullen groan, disclosing a hall, in which stood two men, completely armed, their arquebuses at the ready in their hands, whilst the doorkeeper himself, a sturdy knave, stood full in the entrance, swinging a bunch of "Is the Cavaliere Paolo Baglioni within?"

I asked, as I dismounted, taking it for granted I was to be received, from the preparation I saw was made.

"He is, signore-be pleased to follow." With a warning glance to Jacopo I stepped in, finding myself in a hall of middle size, the walls discolored with age, and chipped and cracked in many places-clearly the Casino Baglioni needed repairs. At the end of the hall was a spiral staircase, whose stone steps, worn to a hollow in the middle by the passing and repassing of feet, marked its great age. Up this narrow stairway I followed the man, until we reached a corridor, hung on each side with rusty suits of armor and old and tattered banners. The place was very damp, and there was a musty smell about it, as if no pure air ever came that way. It was evident that the cavaliere here, armed like those below, with sword cousin, and because you are a man who will presence. I did not include Messer Pluto was on the alert, for a man was on guard and arquebus. To him my guide addressed

"He has come," he said, jerking his thumb packwards at me.

"Well, announce him," said the sentinel. "That is for you," answered the janitor, "I had enough of Pluto this morning." With this he turned on his heel and ran back downstairs, jingling his keys.

The sentry stood still, however, and after rising a little within me. "Will you be good enough to announce

"Cospetto! excellency, call off the bear," shouted the sentry again; indeed he seemed positively to hate the animal, and from inside came a low, deep-toned but mocking laugh. "Come back, Pluto-down, you brute-down!" then there was a heavy "thud," the tinkling of shivered glass, and the bear, dropping on its fore feet, shambled back into the room. His complexion was deathly pale, and by the light which fell from the barred window I saw beneath the skin the little red lines of swollen veins which marked an intemperate life. At a small table beside the chair was a pack of cards and a glass half filled with red wine, the bottle from which the wine was taken was lying in fragments at the door, where it had fallen and broken to bits, after being flung at Pluto. The bear was now beside his master, facing me, his huge head held down and swaying from side to side. We remained for half a minute staring at each other, and then Baglioni spoke again, with his deep, sneering accent: "Is it usual for the Cavaliere di Savelli to pay visits with a drawn sword in his hand?" "Is it usual," I replied, "for gentlemen to be received by having a savage beast set at

"Oh, Pluto:" and he touched the bear; "Pluto was not set at you, man-you would not be here if he was.'

Like the passage outside, the walls were hung with old armor | clined to strike a sudden blow, but held myand old flags. Time had defaced the pictures on the ceiling, and such furniture as there was was old, and the coverings of the chairs and tables moth-eaten and winestained. The stale odor of wine mingled with the must of a long untouched room, and everywhere, on the tables, on the chairs, and strewn here and there on the floor, were cards. Evidently the cavaliere had a weakness in this direction, and like lightning it flashed upon me that if he were a gambler the game was probably in my hands, and I would drop policy and turn to the cards. My thoughts were interrupted by Baglioni, who broke the silence. "What evidence have you to show you are the person you represent yourself to be?"

"I can offer you none. In matters like these one does not carry evidence aboutbut if you like to send a trusted messenger to Rome, to the Cardinal d' Amboise-see the reception he will get-or, nearer still, to Tre-

After a little delay there was a knock at the door, but apparently, as usual, the person outside, whoever he was, did not feel disposed to come in. My host rose in anger and stepped across the room, followed by his beast, the latter passing unpleasantly close to me.

There was an altercation at the door; my host went out with his pet, and for a minute or two I was left alone. I moved my seat nearer to the small table beside Baglioni's lounge, and, taking up the pack of | lioni below the left ear, just where the neck

It cost me a great effort to keep cool; up to now my luck had been so great that every moment there was a temptation to put all to the hazard of one stroke. I smiled under my beard as I thought of the imposing fool Count Carlo had placed in charge of his prize, and when I saw the huge shaking hand clutching the key I could not help thinking that nerves like that would never hold a sword straight, and that for all his size and courage the cavaliere was not a very for-back to the cards." At this moment I heard the bear whining below, impatient for his master, and I knew his bonds were all too slender to hold him, There was nothing for it but to save Angiola in spite of herself. All this happened in a flash, and with my full strength I hit Bagand head united. So sudden, so unexpected was the blow that the huge man rolled over like an ox, and a short shrill scream broke from Angiola. My sword was out in a moment, and I stood over Baglioni. Close to me was a heavy stool. I seized this and flung it at the animal with all my strength, and getting between his forefeet in caused him to stumble and slip back a half dozen steps, but with another roar Fluto gathered himself together and rushed up again, his jaws agape and white with foam. I gave him the point deep into his neck. It might have been a pin prick, and he dented the steel with his teeth. Rising to his feet he struck at me, tearing my short cloak clean off my shoulders, and then my sword was up to the hilt in his side and we grappled. Sterne's Destitution.

Lawrence Sterne, the writer, was the victim of the intensest poverty. A little time before his death, being in a state of destitution, he went one evening to borrow five pounds from his friend Garrick. Upon arriving he heard music and knew that a party was going on He heard the merry laughter, and gently replacing the uplifted knocker re traced his steps. We never feel our mis eries so keenly as when contrasted with the joys of others, and it is only then that we realize Wordsworth's picture: "And homeless near a thousand homes 1

And near a thousand tables pined for Another story of this writer does not evoke so much sympathy. It was known that Sterne used his wife very ill, and in talking with Garrick one day in fine sentimental style of conjugat love and fidelity said: "The husband who behaves unkindly to his wife deserves to have his house burn down over his head." "If you think so." said Garrick, quietly, "I hope yours is well insured."-Detroit Free Press.

A characteristic of the late William Black was his ignorance of his owr books, and it was very difficult to get him to talk about his novels. seemed that as soon as the proof sheets were returned to the printers Mr. Black forgot all about his own ere ations. "In talking to my husband the other day," Mrs. Black once said to # visitor, "I suddenly remembered an an ecdote in one of his novels which illus trated what I was saving. Mr. Black laughed heartily at the story and ther turned eagerly to me: "But where die you hear so good a story?' My hus band wouldn't believe it was in one or his own books until I found it for him."-Detroit Free Press.

At a dinner party one evening he writhed in his chair for over an hour waiting for a chance to introduce his story, but no opportunity presented it self. Finally he slipped a coin into the hand of a waiter and whispered "When you leave the room again slam the door." The waiter slammed the door as directed, and the man sprang to his feet with the exclamation: "What's that noise-a gun?" "Oh, no!" replied his host. "It was only the door." "Ah, I see! Well, speaking of guns reminds Raising Peaches from Seed. The prevalence of yellows among peaches makes their propagation by budding a danger in spreading the disease. It is in the sap, and if any tree which the knife cuts into to make a place for the bud is affected with yellows, the taint will be retained by the knife and spread the yellows to all the trees inoculated. It is quite easy to be sure that a rich, luscious peach is not affected with yellows, especially if gathered from the tree. The pit from such a peach ought to produce a valuable seedling and free from disease. The low repute of seedling peaches dates

To get the most out of any cow, good or bad, good feed and care are necessary, but it is the good cow that gives the best returns when well fed and cared | conducted under the milk receptacle for .- Daily World.

Wet land should be drained, as it may be the most fertile on the farm. By the use of drain tile there will be no unsightly open ditches, and the field can be cultivated as easily as any other. If the land is not very wet the cost of drainage will be but little, and such land will be just as valuable for pasture as before, with the added advantage of being adapted to a greater variety of grasses than formerly. It can then also come under the regular crop rotation. If a plot has been too wet

Beekeeping for Farmers.

We believe that bees ought to be on every farm, if there is anything at all in the neighborhood for them to feed upon. For the outlay there can be to use for ordinary crops it will also be nothing on the farm that will pay better or give more satisfaction. Honey is a delicious and healthful article of diet. It is the most delicate sweet that we have, and, as a correspondent of the Epitomist recently said, a family will consume an astonishing quantity of it. For home consumption alone the subject of beekeeping ought to be of interest to every farmer. As a product for market there is much more profit average farm. Honey will sell for cash at all times. This is a fact that sometimes is overooked in these days of hurry and scramble, but it is a fact none the less. The success of The first five persons procuring the the John M. Smyth Co., Chicago, whose Endless Chain Starch Book from their advertisements are appearing in this paper, is a marked illustration in point. A remendous business has been built up by this firm strictly on its merits. Good goods properly described and offered at a very low price, the unlimited capital of the firm enbling it to buy on extremely advantageous terms. See the striking advertisement elsewhere in this issue and write the John M. Smyth Co., 150 to 166 West Madison St., Chicago, for its mammoth catalogue. Every family should have it.

Motto of the Siamese Nation.

Have you heard the motto of the government of Siam? And having heard it, have you repeated it? And having repeated it, have you caught its purely personal application? And having caught it, have you tried it on your friends? This is the motto: "Ah Wa Ta Nas Siam." It sounds unintelligible nonsense, but keep saying it over as ong as you can and as fast as you can and you will discover at last that the eastern patois has a western sense that aptly classifies many a remorseful subject of Uncle Sam.
